not all luxury vinyl plank (LVP) flooring is click-lock. While click-lock is the most common and popular style for DIY projects, LVP also comes in other installation types, primarily glue-down and loose-lay. YouTube · So That's How... +4

Main Types of LVP Installation

- Click-Lock (Floating): Planks snap together at the edges using a tongue-and-groove system. They float over the subfloor without glue or nails. Kirkland's Flooring +2
- Glue-Down: Planks feature a flat edge and are adhered directly to the subfloor using a liquid or pressure-sensitive adhesive. YouTube · So That's How... +1
- Loose-Lay: Heavy, friction-backed planks sit tightly in place against each other without clicks or permanent glue, relying on weight and a high-friction backing.

If you are planning a project, let me know:

- What kind of subfloor do you have (concrete or wood)?
- Is the area high-moisture (like a bathroom or basement)?

I can help you choose the best type of LVP for your space.
